ABOUT THE ARTIST

Zach Marley is from Louisville, Kentucky and is a freelance low brass artist and teacher currently residing in Chicago, Illinois. Equally versed on all low brass instruments, Zach has been very successful in international competitions on multiple instruments. He was awarded second prize in the prestigious Leonard Falcone Artist Tuba competition two years in a row in 2015 and 2016. During the International Tuba Euphonium Conference in 2016, Zach was a semifinalist in the Artist Tuba competition and was awarded second prize in the Rich Matteson Jazz competition in which he played euphonium. While an undergraduate student at the University of North Texas, Zach was able to perform with the Symphony Orchestra on tuba and the Two O'clock Lab Band on Trombone. Before graduating with a double major in Music Performance and Jazz Studies, Zach was voted most outstanding undergraduate brass student by the entire brass faculty. Currently Zach is pursuing a master's degree in Music Performance at Northwestern University where he has performed with Symphony Orchestra, Jazz Orchestra on lead trombone, and Symphonic Wind Ensemble on both tuba and euphonium.
