ABOUT THE ENSEMBLE

sonic apricity is a new-music duo comprised of violinist Erik Rohde and violist Jacob Tews. The group is dedicated to uncovering and commissioning new works by living composers for violin and viola, performing them alone and in full recitals alongside more established pieces.

The duo's first commissioned piece was from American composer Christopher Walczak (commissioned for the 2016 American Viola Society Festival), titled Flashing Forward Thinking Back. They continue efforts to highlight unexpected works for this combination, and regularly collaborate with living composers.

The duo has performed in venues across the United States and in France, Austria, Italy, and China. In May of 2019, they served as the guest ensemble-in-residence for the Alba International Music Festival Composition Program. They regularly work with both established and young composers, and to date have premiered more than 20 new works, with more on the way.
