Dear Friends,

Despite being the most challenging year in memory, the UNI School of Music had another remarkably successful and productive year. Despite many disruptive measures designed to mitigate spread of COVID-19, faculty and students presented a large number of very successful performances, recordings and videos. There were many artists hosted – though virtually – from around the world that brought a variety of insights to the classroom. The incredible adaptability and creativity of the individuals I am so lucky to work with meant that even a global pandemic could not stop their excellent work. The remarkable flexibility and cooperative approach displayed by our students, faculty and staff helped make an almost impossible situation not only bearable, but stimulating, creative and productive!

The year started off with a tremendously successful virtual Scholarship Benefit Concert. The artistic standards were of the highest quality as was the production value. Thanks to the support of so many loyal friends and alumni like yourself, the event netted similar support for student scholarships as it does in a normal year! Thank you for that support and we hope to welcome everyone back with a more normal live performance with audience at the 2021 Scholarship Benefit Concert on September 24, 2021.

A key reason we were able to have such a successful year was due to our close cooperation with the Gallagher-Bluedorn Performing Arts Center (GBPAC) and its staff. The GBPAC and School of Music collaborated throughout the year in so many ways in order to support each other’s mission. As an example, a majority of large instrumental ensemble rehearsals were moved to the Great Hall stage to facilitate social distancing. The GBPAC’s excellent professional staff helped make sure that things ran smoothly and helped to find innovative ways to support and improve the experience for all. In return, the School of Music supported the GBPAC, which lacked the usual income from tickets, by paying their student crews in order to help both the student workers and the facility.

A new series developed by the GBPAC, Local Legends, featured local musicians in live concerts streamed on Thursday evenings. Many of those concerts featured our faculty and students. The series was so successful, that it is something that will continue beyond the pandemic. Performers and audience members found the experience exciting and entertaining. A special feature of many of those performances included the ability of online viewers to interact with the performers throughout the concert. Messages and questions sent via the comment function were often responded to directly as the performers read them on stage.

The School of Music went through our ten-year review for re-accreditation by the National Association of Schools of Music. We spent most of two years assembling a lengthy self-study that was submitted in advance of a site visit intended to verify the information. Our site visitors came to campus at the end of March to observe all classes, lessons, performances, student records, budgets, etc. They met with faculty, students and academic leaders including our Dean, Executive Vice President and President Nook. They expressed many times how impressed they were with what they were seeing and the fact that we had adapted so well to the unusual circumstances. It was an excellent visit and a good opportunity to take a thoughtful approach to reviewing what we do, how we do it and why.

At the end of the year, we said goodbye to two outstanding colleagues. Mr. Evie “Chuck” Pugh served UNI for 33 years, first as a custodian and finally for many of those years as the key support for ALL functions of the School of Music through his position as Performance Facilities Manager and Technical Director. Besides working full time those years, Mr. Pugh also earned an undergraduate and a graduate degree! His hard work and cheerful disposition were an inspiration to all. We will miss him greatly as he brought heart and soul to the School of Music and was a terrific support for students, faculty and staff.

Dr. Yu-ting ‘Tina’ Su, our horn professor of 15 years, resigned in order to take a position with a university in her home country of Taiwan. Dr. Su was a regular performer on horn and piano throughout the Cedar Valley and had many successful students come through her studio. She is an outstanding artist and will be greatly missed, but we are very happy for her and know she will have great success in her new position as well as being able to be closer to her family.

We are almost ready to launch into what will surely be a dynamic and exciting 2021 academic year. There is a sense of massive pent up energy and creativity that is bursting at the seams to be released. So far things are looking hopeful for a more normal year and with that will come some amazing things! I hope you will be able to join us for some of the events and concerts, either in person or through our live streaming. We look forward to sharing! As our Scholarship Benefit theme this year says, we are ‘Better Together’ and we really look forward to being back together with you, our colleagues and our audiences!

Resiliency: Thriving During a Pandemic

Looking back it is easy to forget how quickly COVID came to Iowa. At first, it seemed to be a distant problem like earlier outbreaks of SARS and Ebola that were generally stopped at our borders. Not so COVID-19. Information came piecemeal. Sometimes we heard contradictory things. What was clear is that COVID was dangerous and early in the outbreak we learned that group singing had been linked to large outbreaks and that wind instruments had a similar potential.

Overnight, performances ceased with an estimated 80% of the entertainment industry losing their employment. Many music programs and some universities shut down. Others shifted to pure online delivery - a very hard way to teach music in general and practically impossible.

UNI’s School of Music is a nationally recognized leader both in music education and performance. Their reputation and the quality of its graduates are fueled by a strong curriculum that focuses on a mixture of music theory, history and performance that combines deep content knowledge and applied performance experiences. This curriculum was challenged by the loss of ensemble rehearsal and performance opportunities - an element that was critical not just to performers but also to future band, orchestra and choral directors.

So, what to do? Luckily the School of Music has many smart folks that are well connected to the world of music education and even as the earliest research and best practices started to come out the UNI School of Music was in the vanguard finding ways to provide the education our students needed.

Vocal students needed large space and large scale social distancing to rehearse safely. Vocal ensembles shrank and were segmented into subsets at the same time that rehearsal moved to large indoor rooms and outdoors. For a time, performances were set aside or became virtual quilts of multiple recording combines.

Banks of large plastic booths were created that enabled students to remain isolated for rehearsal and performance while being next to other equally isolated ensemble mates. Masks with mouthpiece holes were found, some brass instruments were given fabric covers or filters to cover their bells and prevent aerosols from spreading. Rehearsals were rescheduled and offset to allow viral settling and cleaning between ensembles and groups and performance became virtual or were cancelled.

Other highlights included an all-virtual opera performance, live-streamed student and faculty performances that were part of The Gallagher Bluedorn’s Local Legends series and large scale virtual performances that knitted together multiple groups of instruments and ensembles recorded individually for a virtual performance.

It wasn’t easy. As the year progressed, additional research came forward and we were able to modify our practices to reflect the best science available. Despite the challenges, the School of Music was able to meet their learning and teaching goals, safely providing content knowledge and applied practice despite unprecedented challenges. We made sure that our 2020 UNI music graduates went into the world ready to work, teach and succeed in the finest traditions of the program and the University.

But in the end perhaps that was not the most important thing our students or faculty learned. The most important thing they learned is that challenges can be overcome, that unprecedented problems require unprecedented innovation and that greatness is forged in the fire of adversity.

Editor’s note: thank you to Steve Carignan for contributing this article.
With indoor concerts and live audiences largely absent from the world at this time, ensemble conductors worked hard to find ways to bring live music to campus while offering the extremely important music education experience of live performance to our students.

The Panther Marching Band, Wind Ensemble, Symphonic Band, Jazz Bands One, Two and Three, and jazz combos all performed outdoor concerts where audience members brought chairs and blankets and set up on the lawn between East Gym and the Campanile to watch and listen to our student ensembles.

Bringing future students and their families to the UNI campus to visit and to explore the School of Music facilities is one of our most powerful tools for recruiting. With many in-person opportunities eliminated during this unusual time, School of Music faculty and administrators worked to find a way to bring UNI into the homes of future Panthers everywhere.

In January and February, we hosted our first Virtual Visit Days, with more than 100 future students, current students, faculty and staff gathering online to explore degree options, scholarship opportunities, audition tips and more. Visiting students and families noted that audition tips were most welcome, especially with our entrance and scholarship auditions held exclusively online. While we are eager to welcome visitors back to campus and future students to audition in person, we continue to celebrate all the ways we were able to be together and continue to thrive even during these unusual times.
While we were not able to host guests on campus in the usual way, our faculty artists found new ways to invite some exceptional guest artists to interact with School of Music students via Zoom or other online methods. In a typical year, we might not have had the opportunity to host many of these exceptional artists on campus, but schedules that were more flexible and willingness to engage students at a distance turned a challenging time into an opportunity. Here is a list of who our students were able to work with this year.

Faced with the limitations and unique challenges that singing together during COVID-19 brought, UNI Opera faculty and students chose to see and seize the opportunity to create something new.

In fall 2020, “The Monteverdi Project” was released online. “I was excited to welcome our new Opera Director, Richard Gammon, who brought a wealth of professional experience and knowledge to our students here at UNI,” said Associate Professor of Vocal Coaching and Collaborative Piano at UNI Korey Barrett. “In the face of COVID-19,” Barrett continued, “we had to determine what operatic repertoire we could safely produce, knowing that singers would be unable to sing with each other, unmasked, in the same space. Richard had the wonderful idea to produce an evening of monodramas (pieces featuring one voice). He suggested the repertoire of Claudio Monteverdi, a pioneer in the development of opera whose music and characters resonate surprisingly with contemporary audiences, and whose operas have achieved great popularity in houses around the world.”

“By programming works of Monteverdi, I wanted to provide the students and the opera-going community a production free of COVID-19 limitations,” Opera Director Richard Gammon noted. “I devised and directed the pieces very similarly to what I would have done in any opera season. Also, by choosing Monteverdi I was able to concentrate a majority of the rehearsal period on text work and character development. The students were able to analyze the text on a deeper level and much more time was afforded to diction and how language helps shape character. It was an in depth and very rewarding rehearsal process. I was also very excited to introduce the students to this very contemporary style of presenting operas.”

The project received rave reviews, filled with praise for the performers and production.

The spring opera production “In the Studio” celebrated art and music, and the inspiration and connectedness found between the two. Gammon worked with opera students to select works from contemporary operas, all composed within the last 15 to 20 years. Each performer was then asked to select a piece of art that they felt resonated with their aria. UNI Gallery of Art Director Darrell Taylor assisted students in viewing and selecting works from the UNI collection either found in the gallery or in the collection database. In the online video premiere, student musicians and Taylor introduce each piece with a brief discussion of the artwork selected – why the singer selected the piece, the meaning and connection to their aria, and the relevance to the story they were telling with their performance. The chosen piece of art was shown during each of the singers’ video performances, creating an audio and visual landscape which allowed viewers to experience the unique pairings of art and music.

Despite being an unconventional year for singing and studying opera, creativity, innovation and a willingness to explore beyond the stage into the world of art helped our opera students to thrive. Join us in January 2022 for a fully staged opera production in the Gallagher Bluedorn. Learn more at opera.uni.edu.

Editor’s note: thank you to Korey Barrett, Richard Gammon and Shawn Poellet for their help with this article.
Creativity and Collaboration in the Age of Covid:
Emma’s Misadventures in Zoomland

What happens when a composer and a musicologist walk into a bar? This is an unlikely scenario in the midst of a global pandemic that shuttered theatres and concert halls, closed down many of the country’s research libraries (and bars), and made “Zooming in” to work the new normal in 2020. Cedar Rapids Opera Theatre was offering a commission for a short chamber opera. The opera, or “operatini,” was to be in three short “acts,” which would be interspersed with bartender tutorials on how to make opera-themed cocktails. The final product would be filmed and streamed on CROT’s website, thus filling a need for new content when the theatre could not produce live shows, and helping the local bar and restaurant industry by promoting their businesses.

My friend and retired colleague, Nancy Hill Cobb, invited me to collaborate on this project. Nancy is a fine composer; her full-length musical, The Suffragist, premiered at the Gallagher-Bluedorn Performing Arts Center in summer 2021 after being delayed by Covid. But Nancy writes music, not words, and she needed someone to write the libretto. I confess that it took a little arm-twisting to get me to agree. As a musicologist, I have spent most of my career studying opera and writing about opera, my work is based on a solid foundation of serious research methodology and serious subject matter, not to mention the fact that the majority of the composers I usually work with are dead. Thank goodness I was not expected to write rhymed verse! But Nancy also knows that I have a sense of humor, and by late summer of 2020, plenty of experience navigating the perils of Zoom.

We began with the basic premise that the setting would be a Zoom meeting. Through phone calls, text messages, emails, and yes, via Zoom, we tossed ideas back and forth. I had a rough idea of how much (or how little) text was suitable for each short act. We envisioned Emma, our main character, working from home, sitting in front of a computer, interacting with her “husband” (the trombone player, off-screen).

In act 1, “The Zoom Novice,” Emma is a first-time Zoom user who has difficulty understanding passwords and setting up the application. When asked to enter her email password, she does just that, typing in “p-a-s-s-w-o-r-d.” Prompted by Zoom to “test audio,” she vocalizes, because that is what singers do. Turning on the video elicits a different reaction, as Emma realizes that her “bed head,” garish onesie and fuzzy animal slippers are not very attractive! As act 2 begins, she is a little savvier, ring light at the ready, and well-dressed from the waist up. Even her home office has had a makeover, with Elvis Presley’s black-velvet portrait hanging in the background. Despite her new-found confidence, Emma panics at the end when she realizes that something has gone horribly wrong with Karen, her boss. In act 3, Emma reveals that Karen is recovering from a tragic accident that took the life of her beloved cat, Fluffy (funeral march in the accompaniment). Emma is now in charge of the meeting, skillfully employing the “mute” button and reminding her younger colleagues (all named after our grandchildren) of proper office etiquette. Layne is called out for munching on potato chips, Ashley’s butterfly tattoo and cleavage are on fully display, while Darren is shirtless and texting on his phone. All of this is exhausting; Emma asks her husband for more wine – just bring the whole bottle!

Wordplay, musical puns, and pop culture references run throughout—some subtle and some not—but most often poking fun at the business of working from home as well as the conventions of opera. The premise works because Suzanne Hendrix-Case is the perfect “Emma.” After more than a year of dealing with remote meetings and ridiculous situations, we can all relate to Emma’s misadventures in Zoomland. A live performance is planned for Cedar Rapids in September 2021. In the meantime, the video is still available at www.cropera.org/operatini, free to view, but donations to CROT are welcome.

Ernest Reineke

The UNI School of Music is celebrating an important milestone, the 25th Anniversary of our Masters of Music in Music Education Distance Education program. We recently checked in with the very first graduate of the program, Ernest Reineke, who is currently in his 33rd year of teaching, and learned how the program was created and has impacted his incredible teaching career. We would love to share some perspective on not only how the program was developed, but also how the program has adapted and changed over the years.

It is not an exaggeration to say that Reineke was directly involved in the creation of the MM distance learning program. It was his ideal Reineke recalls, “In 1990, the University of Northern Iowa College of Education created an off-campus Master of Arts in Education degree program to be delivered in Estherville, Iowa. This was created to fulfill the need for teachers to achieve a higher education degree in a non-residency format. The program was administered when professors flew in a twin-engine airplane from Cedar Falls to the Estherville airport. The professors were driven to Iowa Lakes Community College where the program was implemented. My wife, Melodee Weisbrod Reineke (UNI, MAE, 1993), was in that experimental program. Each week, I drove Melodee to Estherville for her to take classes, and I waited in the library writing curriculum for my teaching position at Algona, Iowa.”

Inspired by his wife’s non-resident program, Reineke contacted former UNI music professor Dr. Fred Rees. He inquired if there was the potential for music professors to travel with the MAE teachers to Estherville and create a non-resident Master of Music degree. The two investigated the possibility of running a concurrent program, but when enrollment projections fell short of making the off-campus program viable in Northwest Iowa, their discussions eventually led to a new degree plan with courses offered through the Iowa Communications Network (ICN). The ICN technology was still somewhat new at the time, but the technology provided a vehicle capable of delivering instruction to teachers across the entire state of Iowa, not just the Northwest region. While Dr. Rees worked on campus to create the degree program, Reineke helped recruit across the state. While waiting for approval, Reineke contemplated pursuing a graduate degree in administration. When the UNI degree was approved in 1993, he had to make a choice and ultimately enrolled in the degree he helped to create. He attended ICN courses at Iowa Lakes Community College and spent two summers in residency taking classes in Cedar Falls. Reineke became the first graduate of the program on December 20, 1996. He later fulfilled his other ambition and went on to earn his administrative endorsements from Buena Vista University.

Reineke, who currently teaches in Mason City, has gone on to have an amazing career. “Because of my degree from UNI, I have been able to be an adjunct professor at Iowa Lakes Community College, teaching music appreciation and music theory courses. My primary teaching career has included K-12 vocal music and 5-8 instrumental music. The depth of knowledge that I received at UNI has made me a much more superior teacher. The program is very rigorous, but that philosophy instilled into me that hard work is rewarded both for me personally, and for the students in my classroom. I do highly recommend the UNI master of music degree program because the professors do care about your success in both the classroom and your professional career. The courses are both challenging and fulfilling. I never felt there was ‘busy work.’ All of my classes meshed perfectly together and brought me to an even higher level of depth of knowledge from what I had learned in my undergraduate work at Northwestern College in Orange City, Iowa.”

The degree has transformed since its conception. The ICN network remained the primary vehicle of communication for many years, allowing students to drive a short distance to community colleges and other locations throughout the state to “attend” class. More recently, advancements in technology have allowed the degree to be delivered through interactive video conferencing methods and eLearning platforms. Students are now able to complete coursework and connect with their professors from home, creating even more flexibility. In fact, the website Intelligent.com recently listed our program in their ranking of “The Top 39 Online Master’s in Music Education Programs,” noting that we were the “most flexible.”

We are keenly aware that students’ needs are diverse and ever-changing. With that in mind, we are currently restructuring our distance learning MM Music Education program with intentions to enroll a new cohort in the summer of 2022. The newly designed program will address the needs of today’s music educators and is built with even more flexibility in mind; students will have the option to complete the coursework in a condensed 13 month format or spread over two years. There will also be thesis or non-thesis options, allowing students to tailor the program to meet their research goals. Courses will be taught by our full-time, permanent faculty members, each experts in their respective fields, who remain actively engaged in research and teaching at a national level.

Looking back on the history of the program, UNI has a lot to be proud of, and so does Reineke. “To see that this program has continued for twenty-five years is a testament to how progressive the School of Music is at UNI. To see that the program is now under review and enhanced to serve the university in the future shows the university’s commitment to forward planning and a growth mindset. I had mentioned to Dr. Michelle Swanson, UNI school of music professor, that Northwestern College gave me the foundation I needed to stand on to be the teacher I am today; but UNI gave me the wings to fly.”

Editor’s note: thank you to Suzanne Hendrix-Case for her contribution of this article, with assistance from Ernest Reineke and Justin Mertz.
With live indoor performances on hold for the year, the Jazz Studies Division needed to get creative to put together opportunities for our students. Outdoor performances were mounted on the east side of West Gym (facing the campanile) on September 29 (big bands), October 9 (combos), April 23 (all groups, but featuring Jazz Band Three) and April 30 (Jazz Bands One and Two, rescheduled several times due to inhospitable weather conditions). In the colder months of November and March, Jazz Bands One and Two put together layered recordings in the Jazz Studio at Russell Hall. Several students and faculty contributed new compositions and arrangements. In addition, each combo had the opportunity to record a selection on a long session held on May 2. The previous day, the combo Bad News recorded six original pieces on their own session, funded through a competitive grant from the Intercollegiate Academic Fund. A showcase album of this material was released in summer 2021, featuring each group that recorded. This recording took the place of the traditional full-length offering from Jazz Band One for the year.

February brought a socially distanced Tallcorn Jazz Festival and virtual Sinfonian Dimensions in Jazz (SDIJ) concert. Once again, creativity was brought to bear on the challenge of how to continue the festival given the restrictions on campus visits. In the end, 46 high school jazz bands submitted video recordings, and a panel of New York jazz musicians was enlisted to provide video commentary. The panel, all of whom were recent guests to our campus, included trumpeter Dave Douglas, trombonist Ryan Keberle, pianist David Berkman, and drummers Carl Allen and Matt Wilson. Each clinician was paired with a UNI jazz professor (Christopher Merz, Michael Conrad, Anthony Williams, Alexander Pershounin, and Robert Dunn), who provided live clinics for all of the bands, via Zoom. In place of the SDIJ concert, we assembled and released a virtual showcase concert featuring UNI Jazz Bands One and Two, as well as clips from outstanding bands and soloists from the festival.

As for the summer, our traditional week-long combo camp was also on hold. Instead, we offered a one-day combo experience called Jazz on a Summer’s Day, once again teaming high school students with UNI faculty members.

The Jazz Division wishes to thank everyone who made these endeavors possible. Tom Barry deserves special recognition for his tireless work in both the recording studio and at our remote concert location. Without him and his crew of student workers, none of this would have been possible. Thanks so much, Tom.

Community Outreach

Our community outreach programs continued to explore new and innovative ways of bringing music to their students this year. Read more about these initiatives below!

Community Music School

While the halls in the music buildings on campus were a little bit quieter, that did not mean that the music stopped. It was with great dedication, creativity, and support that the Community Music School (CMS) embraced their mission of creating innovative music experiences for all of our members, and providing teaching experience for UNI students. Knowing that there would be challenges, CMS teachers and staff affirmed that while the approach to how lessons and rehearsals would need to evolve, they would continue to create music together. Through all of the challenges, the New Horizons Band and Children’s Choir presented successful concerts, and individual student successes were clearly displayed at recitals, performances at school solos festivals, and successful Iowa All-State Auditions.

Notably, during such a challenging year, New Horizons Band Director, Diana Blake, was honored with the Karl King Distinguished Service Award for retired band directors from the Iowa Bandmasters Association. Blake is an active member of the Cedar Valley’s musical community. When not conducting the New Horizons Band, you can find her teaching, playing in area community ensembles, including the Waterloo and Cedar Falls Community Bands, and serving in leadership positions in various boards and committees, all while sharing her sage words of wisdom and wit.

The UNI Children’s Choir (UNICC) resumed rehearsals this past winter, with new director Dr. Amy Kotsonis. Prior to starting rehearsals, we held a Zoom meeting for members to meet Dr. K and learn about the upcoming session. UNICC members met safely with a shortened rehearsal time, masks, and 12-foot distance between each member. Dr. K remarked how proud she was of all the singers, “The students are doing really well and working hard in a very difficult situation.” During rehearsals, in addition to learning their songs, members worked on note and rhythm reading. The semester concluded with a live performance in the Great Hall.

CMS director Heather Hamilton noted, “We look forward to next year, and seeing the return of more members to our ensembles, in-person performance opportunities, but most importantly continuing to provide musical moments that inspire music to last a lifetime!”

UNI Suzuki School

The UNI Suzuki School faced unusual challenges during the pandemic. Even though large ensemble performances, special events, and orchestra tours were canceled, teachers explored and utilized multiple platforms to reach their young students and continued to teach individual and group lessons. Weekly routines included each for every student with parents assisting in finding the best virtual set-up. Creative solutions to these challenges included virtual recitals in the fall and spring, and parent/teacher conferences and staff meetings via Zoom. Teachers also were able to socially distance in outdoor individual and group lessons when weather permitted. Continued and increased support from donors contributing to the scholarship fund helped families impacted by the hardships during this most difficult time with increased available financial assistance. The UNI Suzuki School looks forward to returning to in-person instruction, on campus activities, outreach performances, and orchestra tours.
For spring 2021, the Spectrum Project went online and became Spectrum Project Connections. This new virtual format kept the Spectrum Project performers and buddies connected during a time when they were missing their friends. This new program was entirely directed by UNI students and served 31 families from Iowa to Florida.

Each virtual session (i.e., connection) was designed by UNI student directors and engaged performers to dance, act, sing, play music and show off their artwork. These connections were not the typical Zoom call or class. From the comfort of their own home, performers were free to express themselves and show off their "spectrum of enthusiasms." Buddies and performers turned everyday objects into musical instruments, artwork and everything imaginable. UNI student directors included music education majors Elinor Johl and Mary Funk. Along with four other directors, they designed six online sessions for engaging activities in art, dance, music and drama.

For spring 2022, Spectrum Project will be returning to in-person rehearsals while also including virtual sessions for those who prefer to participate online.

Join us for the UNI School of Music’s 40th annual Scholarship Benefit Concert

Friday, September 24, 2021, 7:30 p.m.

Live in the Gallagher Bluedorn Great Hall

We’re thrilled to welcome you back to the Great Hall at the Gallagher Bluedorn for the return of our live, in-person Scholarship Benefit Concert: Better Together! Over the past year and a half, our student musicians and faculty artists have missed the deeply important connection with you, our audience and supporters. We truly believe this will be a special evening of reconnecting and celebrating with some exceptional music.

The concert will include performances by the Northern Iowa Symphony Orchestra, UNI Opera, Wind Ensemble, UNI Singers, Concert Chorale, Opera Ensemble, and Jazz Band One, with featured faculty artists Sean Botkin, Kramer Milan and Matthew Andreini.

Please join us for this exciting event and help to support student scholarships at UNI’s School of Music!

The Scholarship Benefit Concerts have been raising scholarship funds for exceptionally talented music students and students in need since 1982. In addition to the income from tickets sales for the concerts, we have developed a network of community, small business, corporate, and university-related donors. The extent of this support has been most gratifying to the students and faculty at UNI’s School of Music.

To allow us to continue the support we have provided in the past, please consider becoming a special donor. To become a special donor, contact the School of Music office #72 Gallagher Bluedorn Performing Arts Center by calling (319) 273-2025 or visit music.uni.edu/events/scholarship-benefit-concert.

The UNI School of Music proudly recognizes last year’s competition winners and acknowledges the many honors and awards that our students have earned.

Student Awards

Tristen Perrault

In spring 2021, Tristen Perrault was named the 2021 Presser Scholar and awarded the $4,000 Presser Foundation Award. Tristen was born and raised in Cedar Rapids, and is a senior at UNI. He is pursuing a degree in Music Composition-Theory and studies under the direction of Dr. Jonathan Schwabe. Tristen’s works have been performed throughout the UNI School of Music. Specifically, his choral composition Ave Maria, recorded by the UNI Concert Chorale, and the organ solo: Toccata Angelicum, performed by Brenda Sevcik. Tristen participates in many of UNI’s choral ensembles and directs, composes, and arranges for the Catholic Men’s Chorus at St. Stephen the Witness Catholic Student Center.

Ethan Staples

In April 2021, the virtual Emerging Artist Competition was held with finalists competing by video submission. Ethan Staples, clarinet, was awarded the top honor of the Charles and Marleta Matheson Award. Ethan is double majoring in Music Education and Clarinet Performance and is in the Studio of Dr. Amanda McCandless. He has been a member of Jazz Band Three, Jazz Band Two, Symphonic Band, Wind Ensemble, and Orchestra as well as being the current President of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia’s Beta Nu chapter. He hopes to graduate UNI and continue into a graduate program focusing on woodwind performance.

Morgan Eadie

Morgan Eadie, trumpet, claimed the Myron and Ruth Russell Award at the Emerging Artist Competition. Eadie started trumpet in 5th grade, becoming an active player in church to begin her career. At Prairie High School, she played principal trumpet in her ensembles and was the John Philip Sousa Award recipient. At UNI, she has been part of the trumpet studio for three years, as well as Wind Ensemble, Jazz Band Three, Jazz Band One, Panther Marching Band (PMB), and the Biscotti Brass Quintet. She frequently plays solo/principal trumpet in Wind Ensemble, was a section leader in the PMB, New Horizons Trumpet Director, and Jazz Librarian. Morgan was also named the winner of Dr. Scott Belck’s online video competition in spring 2021.

Ren Mattson was accepted to perform on alto flute with the 2021 National Flute Association Collegiate Honor Choir. Ren also recently won an internship in the business office of the Des Moines Symphony, which they will begin in fall 2021.

Twelve members of the Panther Marching Band were selected to perform with the College Band Directors National Association’s Intercollegiate Marching Band. These students performed for the College Football National Championship with 1,200 other students from over 200 colleges and universities. The featured students were twirler Sophia Aguirre; colorguard members Cecelia Bartemes, Keira Doyle, Kelzi Mather, Grant Sanford, and Melina Tyson; drumline members Zoey Cobb and Kane Olesen; drum major Timarie LaFoy; saxophone player Emily Wibben; trombone player Tim Warnke; and trumpet player Hannah Butler.

Congratulations to all of our award-winning and honor-earning students!
School of Music Earns High Honors

With the long list of awards and honors that School of Music students earned this year, it may come as no surprise to learn that many of our students are part of the Honors program at UNI. The Honors program at UNI aims to offer a more challenging, rewarding and engaging experience to UNI students, through advanced coursework in liberal arts and other Honors curriculum as well as a final senior thesis/project. The School of Music is proud to congratulate our Honors program students and those who have earned a place on the Dean’s List or as a Presidential or Provost Scholar this year. Scholars are as follow:

Honors Program Students:

Presidential Scholars:
Madeleine Hartleip, Chloe Ngo and Alayna Ringsby.

The School of Music would also like to congratulate the School of Music students who appeared on the fall 2020 and spring 2021 Dean’s List. To be included on the list, a student must have earned a grade point average of 3.5 or higher on a 4.0 scale, while taking at least 12 hours of graded work during the semester.

Editor’s note: Thank you to Brenda Hackenmiller for her help with this article.

Student Spotlight:
Athena-Sadé Whiteside

Athena-Sadé Whiteside is a graduate vocal performance major, studying with Dr. Jean McDonald. Originally from Des Moines, Athena-Sadé has been part of Concert Chorale, UNI Singers, and the Opera ensemble, and states that her favorite course at UNI has been Advanced Vocal Performance with Richard Gammon.

In 2020-21, Athena-Sadé was featured in both UNI Opera’s fall production “The Monteverdi Project” and the spring production “In the Studio.” Whiteside played La Ninfa in Monteverdi’s Lamento della Ninfa, and sang “Triptych” from Margaret Garner.

“My favorite part of studying at UNI has been studying under such intelligent and talented professors,” Athena-Sadé said. “My private voice teacher, Dr. Jean McDonald, has been the most supportive and influential throughout my time at UNI. She has consistently believed in me and supported me in my growth as a singer. I am extremely grateful to have been able to study with such a wonderful teacher and human being.”

After graduation, Whiteside plans to continue teaching voice lessons and expand her private studio. She plans to audition for Young Artist programs with hopes of continuing performing opera.

Congratulations on your outstanding achievements at UNI and best of luck in your future, Athena!
Our recent graduates are doing amazing things! Many are continuing on to further study, while others have already assumed teaching or other professional positions throughout Iowa, and as far away as California and Colombia. We are so proud of all that these students are achieving and we wanted to share some of the most recent news with you.

Editor’s note: Thank you to Melinda Boyd, Amy Mohr and the School of Music faculty for their help with this article.

“Bad News” (student ensemble featuring Tyler Utter, Johnny Hartleip, Luke Sanders, Max McBride, Michael Gedden, and Jackson Schou), awarded an IAF grant to make a recording of original music.
Concert organist and research scholar Randall Harlow has long dodged conventional expectations. As a performer, he has eschewed the competition circuit, choosing instead to explore the outer reaches of the organ repertoire, from avant-garde contemporary and electro-acoustic compositions and forgotten works of the past to chamber music, concertos, and transcriptions. Performances have taken him across the US, to Russia, France, Germany, Greenland, and cathedrals in England. He can be heard on American Public Media’s nationally syndicated radio show Pipedreams.

As a scholar, Randall Harlow’s interests range from empirical performance-cognition research, with a focus on gesture and ecological theories, to hyper-acoustic instruments and performance technologies. His recent article, “Ecologies of Practice in Musical Performance” was published in a special issue of the ethnomusicology journal, MUSICultures. He was awarded a 2019-20 Fulbright Global Scholar Award for his Global Hyperorgan project. A collaboration with McGill University’s IDMIL laboratory and the Orgelpark research center in Amsterdam, the Global Hyperorgan is an intercontinental musical instrument, a new kind of global space for acoustic musical play.

In 2015, he was awarded a Diesterweg Fellowship and served as a guest professor at the University of Siegen, Germany. He has twice been a keynote speaker at Orgelpark symposiums in Amsterdam, and has presented at conferences at Cornell, Harvard, and Oxford Universities, the International Conference on Music Perception and Cognition (ICMPC), Performance Studies Network (PSN), Porto International Conference on Musical Gesture in Portugal, Göteborg International Organ Academy in Sweden (GOArt), the Westfield Center, and Eastman Rochester Organ Initiative Festival (EROI). He holds a Doctor of Musical Arts degree from the Eastman School of Music, following previous degrees at Emory and Indiana Universities, and served for a year on faculty at Cornell University. His organ teachers have included Hans Davidson, Timothy Albrecht and Christopher Young, and William Porter in improvisation. Randall Harlow is currently Associate Professor of Organ and Music Theory at UNI.

His numerous premieres include the North American premiere of Karlheinz Stockhausen’s Himmelfahrt, the First Hour of KLÄNG, and works for organ with live-electronics by Steve Everett and Rene Uijlenhoet. Also an avid performer with orchestra, he performs the organ concertos of Lou Harrison and Chen Yi, and gave the North American premieres of concertos by Petr Eben, Tilo Medek, and Giles Swayne. He also premiered the first and only Barlow Prize commission for organ, Exodus by Aaron Travers. His debut CD, Transcendante, features the first transcription for organ of Franz Liszt’s legendary Transcendental Etudes, released on the Pro Organo label. A third album is forthcoming, featuring spectral and microtonal extemporizations on a mechanical baroque organ.

As a specialist in contemporary music, Randall Harlow was the first organist to be awarded a coveted New Music USA Project and an Aaron Copland Fund Recording Grant, in support of his second album, Organon Novus. The most comprehensive recording ever made of contemporary American organ music, the 3-disc anthology features more than twenty world premiere recordings of works by major American composers, from Samuel Adler, David Lang, and Alvin Lucier to Shulamit Ran, Christian Wolff and John Zorn, to be released on the Innova label in late 2019. He performed many of these works in a series of concerts at Indiana University, the University of Chicago, Harvard and Stanford Universities.

In his career, Randall Harlow has also performed with orchestras including the Minnesota Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, and the Cleveland Orchestra. His numerous premieres include the North American premiere of Karlheinz Stockhausen’s Himmelfahrt, the First Hour of KLÄNG, and works for organ with live-electronics by Steve Everett and Rene Uijlenhoet. Also an avid performer with orchestra, he performs the organ concertos of Lou Harrison and Chen Yi, and gave the North American premieres of concertos by Petr Eben, Tilo Medek, and Giles Swayne.

As a scholar, Randall Harlow’s interests range from empirical performance-cognition research, with a focus on gesture and ecological theories, to hyper-acoustic instruments and performance technologies. Every End is a New Beginning:
New Hires and Retirements in the School of Music

This year the School of Music celebrated the influential career of one exceptional staff member as they retired in 2021: Chuck Pugh celebrated his retirement this year.

Evie Charles Pugh
Technical Director and Performance Facilities Manager

Evie Charles Pugh, better known as ‘Chuck’ to most UNI students, faculty and alumni, is a native of Alabama. Born and raised in the small country town of Grove Hill, he has always had a love for music and entertainment. Chuck began his career at UNI in the fall of 1988 in the building services department. While serving full time on staff at UNI, Chuck earned his Bachelor of Arts in 1997 and Master of Arts in 2000 from UNI. Chuck transitioned from his role in building services, to the School of Music where he served as Technical Director and Performance Facilities Manager until his retirement in 2021.

A musician himself, Chuck plays bass guitar and is director of the men’s chorus at Pilgrim Rest Missionary Baptist Church. He also plays contemporary gospel music for the adult and teen choirs. Chuck has performed with professional gospel quartet groups all over the United States including the late Willie Neal Johnson and the Gospel Keynotes of Tyler Texas, The Blind Boys of Alabama, The Mighty Clouds of Joy of Los Angeles, CA, and The Soul Stirrers of Chicago, IL.

Chuck resides in Waterloo with his wife Willie Mae. He has four daughters: Kisha, Evia, Renee, and Taneka, and four grandchildren. A celebration of Chuck’s 33 years of service at UNI was held on May 7.

While we say goodbye to this remarkable staff member, we are excited to welcome new faculty and staff who begin their UNI journey this year.
Ben Roidl-Ward was appointed as Assistant Professor of Bassoon at the University of Northern Iowa in fall of 2021. His dedication to working with and advocating for composers of his generation has led him to commission and premiere numerous solo and chamber works featuring the bassoon with the goal of broadening the repertoire and expanding the possibilities of the instrument.

Dr. Roidl-Ward has appeared as a soloist with the Seattle Symphony and the Northwestern and Oberlin Contemporary Music Ensembles, along with several regional orchestras throughout the United States. He has performed with the International Contemporary Ensemble, Ensemble Dal Niente, the Spektral Quartet, the Chicago Symphony, and the New York Philharmonic. His festival appearances include the Mostly Mozart, Ravinia, Tanglewood, Lucerne, Spoleto, and Banff Festivals.

A 2018 Luminarts Fellow in Classical Music, Dr. Roidl-Ward was recently named one of five finalists for the International Double Reed Society’s 2020 Gillet-Fox Competition. He is currently the second bassoonist of the Illinois Symphony and was a member of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago for three years. In addition to teaching at UNI, Dr. Roidl-Ward teaches at the North Carolina Governor’s School in the summer and serves as a Mentor for the Chicago Musical Pathways Initiative. He is also a Contemporary Leader for the Lucerne Festival in Switzerland, a position that involves helping to curate the annual Lucerne Forward! Festival, mentoring members of the Lucerne Festival Academy, and performing with the Lucerne Festival Contemporary Orchestra.

Dr. Roidl-Ward received his DMA from Northwestern University, where he studied with David McGill. His dissertation focused on the bassoon’s multiphonics and methods of notating them. His previous teachers include Ben Kamins at Rice University, George Sakakeeny at the Oberlin Conservatory, and Francine Peterson in the Seattle area.

Sandy Nordahl currently serves as Technical Director and Performance Facilities Manager for the UNI School of Music. He also serves as an adjunct instructor in Music Technology, Audio for Theatre, and Electronic Music Composition.

Before joining the School of Music staff in 2021, Sandy served as Technical Director of the Gallagher Bluedorn Performing Arts Center for over 20 years. In this role, Sandy directed the technical staffing and operations for the 1,600-seat mainstage performance center, which presented approximately 250 events per year. During his time with the Gallagher Bluedorn, he worked with legendary artists and productions including B.B. King, Bela Fleck, Edgar Meyer, Cats, Miss Saigon, Blue Man Group, Bill Cosby, Stephan Lang, Merce Cunningham Dance Company, and Bonnie Raitt. Sandy oversaw the redesign and replacement of the facility’s audio, video and lighting systems, managing budgets that totaled close to $800,000 in grant funding.

Nordahl holds a Master of Music degree from the University of Oklahoma. His Thesis, Three Basic Elements, a work for video and electronic music, was the first ever electronic thesis accepted by the graduate college as a final document. Sandy received a scholarship in composition at the University of Oklahoma. In the summer of 1998, Sandy studied with Karlheinz Stockhausen in Kuerten, Germany. In 2012, Sandy attended the CNMAT Max workshop, a weeklong residency studying the software package MAX/MSP.

Outside of academia, Sandy is a founding member of Data Stream, an electro-acoustic music ensemble with three compact disc releases. Data Stream has performed throughout the Midwest at such venues as New Genre Festival in Tulsa, OK, University of St. Louis, Oklahoma State University, Hearst Center for the Arts, Valley City State University, North Dakota, and St. Olaf College Northfield, MN.

Sandy has created video works to accompany live orchestral music, written reviews of music releases for Computer Music Journal, and is an active performer and composer on the UNI campus and throughout the United States.
Emeritus Faculty Activities

The School of Music is always excited to hear from our exceptional retired professors. We continue to see the lasting effect of their years of dedication and service to our students, and are happy to bring you news on their current projects.

David Buch – David wrote to us about keeping busy during this unconventional year. “Lucy retired last February, just in time to cancel our travel plans, although we did get to Israel in January. I hosted and lectured for the series “Opera Insider” at Lyric Opera of Chicago until all activities ceased in mid-March 2020. The internet proved sufficient to locate archival sources and work with individuals and institutions on three continents in order to produce a study entitled “Concepción Gómez de Jacoby: Tárrega’s Enigmatic Patron and Recuerdos de la Alhambra.” This was published online at michaelorenz.blogspot.com/2020/11/concepcion-gomez-de-jacoby-tarregas.html. Besides that, I am playing a lot of music, editing transcriptions and making new arrangements. Finally, I highly recommend granddaughters to those whose children oblige them. Ours are simply the most delightful creatures imaginable.”

Rebecca Burkhardt – After relocating to Santa Fe, New Mexico post-retirement, Becky returned to Cedar Falls in the summer of 2021 to serve as musical director for the stage premiere of fellow Emeritus professor Nancy Hill Cobb’s new musical The Suffragist. Rehearsals and performances were held in the Gallagher Bluedorn and featured Tony-nominated actress Nancy Opel alongside a stellar cast which featured several School of Music alumni.

Ronald Johnson – Ron reported that he had released his first book! “I had my book published in November of 2020. Magic Happens! . . . My Journey With the Northern Iowa Wind Symphony is published by Maxime’s Music in Australia, and available from Amazon, Apple Books, and Barnes and Noble. Though a bit biased, I believe it to be a great story! It has a little bit about my time before coming to Northern Iowa, then what happened during those 35 years. Many stories and photos can be found along the way. Also, I have started another book entitled Magyar Memories, a collection of stories and memories from my sixteen years of traveling and teaching in Hungary. I hope to have it finished in the fall of 2021.”

Bob Washut – Bob dropped us a note to update us, saying, “I haven’t had a whole lot going on during the pandemic but I did play 110 rounds of golf last year. A personal best! I also completed a handful of commissioned pieces and officially came out of musical hibernation, performance-wise, on April 15 with my Emeritut group on the GBPAC’s Local Legends series.”

Isaac John Roerig, of Sioux City, Iowa, passed away on Oct. 9, 2020, in Cedar Falls, Iowa, from injuries sustained in a vehicle accident. At the time of his death, Isaac was a freshman at UNI studying choral music education. Isaac was active in campus ministry at St. Stephen the Witness Catholic Student Center. He was a member of the UNI Panther Marching Band Drumline, played percussion in the UNI Symphonic Band and sang bass with the UNI Singers. On Oct. 18, 2020, he received his bachelor of music degree in memoriam. Dr. Amy Kotsonis worked with Isaac in UNI Singers, and reflected on her time with him saying, “As a freshman, Isaac befriended and made an impression on so many in such a short time. [He] was kind, outgoing, and friendly to everyone. We are going to miss that smile so much, and are at a loss for losing such an incredible future teacher too soon.”

Lathon Jernigan, former School of Music faculty artist, passed away in February 2021. Lathon came to UNI in 1971 as Instructor of Music Theory, Aural Training, and Sight Singing. In 1974 his teaching duties were considerably expanded to other musical areas. His great joy in teaching at UNI was increased when he realized he was now teaching the children of former pupils. While at UNI, Lathon also conducted the Waterloo-Cedar Falls Symphony Orchestra for two seasons and the Wartburg Community Symphony Orchestra for four seasons. He served 14 years as principal keyboardist in the WCFSO, two years as accompanist for the Metropolitan Chorale of Waterloo, and 40 years as organist at the United Church of Christ in Cedar Falls. Remembering Dr. Jernigan, School of Music director Jeff Funderburk said, “Lathon Jernigan was a wonderful colleague and devoted teacher for several generations of students.” Emeritus professor David Buch also shared his memory of Dr. Jernigan, “He was a wonderful southern gentleman whose considerable musical abilities were often obscured by his deep modesty. He had the keenest mind for inner workings of music, which he shared generously with his students and colleagues. He engendered affection and respect from everyone I knew at UNI.”

During the 2019-2020 season I was in New York City finishing my tenure as a young artist with the Metropolitan Opera’s Lindemann Young Artist Development Program. On October 11 of 2019, at the age of 25, I made my Met debut as Kate Pinkerton in the gorgeous Minghella Production of Puccini’s eternal Madama Butterfly. Summer of 2020, I was slated to return to Wolf Trap Opera as a Filene Artist. Even with my tenure at Lindemann wrapping up things were looking very, very good professionally.

And then, COVID-19.

It seemed like a nightmare. New York City shut down. Contracts and future engagements were canceled or postponed with the hope of rescheduling. After a few weeks, I packed up most of my things, mailed 22 boxes to myself, and took one of the last flights from Newark, NJ to Iowa with my cat, cello, and several suitcases. Nothing encourages social distance more than meowing (from my cat) and a weirdly shaped instrument.

Besides a trip back to NYC to clean out the rest of my apartment before heading to Virginia for Wolf Trap, I lived in Cedar Falls, my hometown. I threw myself into gardening, applying to a program to go into mortuary science, and practicing for my interview with Schwann’s.

I tried not to let a specific thought plague me: How does an artist create when everything they knew was gone?

After Wolf Trap 2020 however, I knew I could not abandon my art so easily. So, I made plans to make art on my terms, and no one else’s. This was the best decision I have ever made. I reached out to my friend Matthew Gemmill, a native Iowan, who was also back in his hometown. We programmed a recital, and while the world was falling apart around us, we drove to one another and rehearsed works by Brahms, Elgar, and a world premiere by Philip Wharton, yet another Iowan.

I then reached out to dear friend Mark Bilyeu. Mark and I programmed Libby Larsen’s Mary Cassatt with trombonist Derek Bromme as well as Dominick Argento’s From the Diary of Virginia Woolf.

The Larsen is to be performed with projections of Cassatt’s paintings. Why not continue this visual element throughout the rest of the recital? I combined dear friend Mer Brich’s artwork and animated script of excerpts of Woolf’s writing by Alexandra Saulsbury, a UNI alumna, into a projected presentation to be shown during the Argento. The result of these efforts was a beautiful, cohesive production.

The most important thing for me during this pandemic was rediscovering my artistry. Experiencing emotions in the present became paramount. Knowing that it is ok not to be constantly working towards something professionally. Sitting with a mug of coffee and bird watching in my childhood home is just as important as working on mastering an aria for an audition.

In my preparation of Edward Elgar’s Sea Pictures I kept returning to a phrase from Elizabeth Barrett Browning’s poem Sabbath Morning at Sea.

“And though this sabbath comes to me without the stolèd minister, or chanting congregation, god’s spirit shall give comfort…”

I cried when I sang this. Before this year, I don’t think I’ve ever cried while singing in a performance. I identified with the text and music on a visceral level having spent the pandemic parted from loved ones. Uncertain of when the end would come. If all of us would be there or if we would lose a loved one. This phrase gave me comfort to know that as a species we have experienced these times before. We were isolated yet more united in some ways than I think we have ever been.

Have I changed the way I relate to the identity of being an artist, or has my changing identity as an artist changed me? I think both. Either way, my experiences this year with trusting friends who went on these artistic journeys with me will never leave me. I have changed for better or for worse. Look out, world. My art will not be silenced.

Margaret Bradford

Margaret Bradford (BS ’91) has been a lifelong musician and arts advocate. She began playing the piano at a young age, encouraged by her mother who was an accomplished pianist. Bradford continued playing into her young adult life while studying for two years at Northwestern University, but her love of piano remained on the back burner until she and her husband Robert moved to Waterloo.

The Bradford’s home housed a beautiful Steinway piano and Margaret felt moved to play again. “Music and the study of music all comes back to the piano for me,” Margaret said. So, she made a call to Myron Russell in the UNI School of Music, and he recommended that she reach out to Joyce Gault.

“She was so encouraging,” Margaret said. “But she was honest – she didn’t have the time or space in her private studio for another student. So, she encouraged me to enroll at UNI part-time so that I could register for lessons in the School of Music.”

That is exactly what Margaret did.

In her time at UNI studying with Gault, Margaret explored many courses and became a lifelong learner. She remained enrolled at UNI for 19 years, motivated by the desire to continue studying with her piano teacher. “Joyce Gault was such an inspiration and so patient with me all those years! She helped me work through serious performance anxiety, and I am also grateful to her for introducing me to the works of Francis Poulenc, and a wealth of other music.” Reflecting on her time at UNI Margaret noted, “It was quite a ride!”

After her graduation from UNI in 1991, Margaret continued her lifelong pursuit of knowledge at the University of Iowa, earning a Ph.D. in archeology and anthropology. But, her mind always returned to her time at the piano and her study of music at UNI. It was this deep love of music that motivated her to give to UNI and the School of Music. “This is just a little payback. Maybe this will bring exceptional guests to the School of Music that the students can learn from.”

As much as she still loves playing, Margaret usually prefers to remain out of the spotlight. However, her generous spirit allowed us to bring her story to you. “If you think it will help to inspire others to give, I’m happy to help.”

Editor’s note: thank you to Margaret Bradford for her help with this article.

Let your legacy live on.

Make a gift to the UNI School of Music.

Berdena Beach, Ph.D., passed away in June 2017, but through her wonderful generosity and desire to provide permanent support for the UNI School of Music, she will bring nationally and internationally renowned artists in the field of music to the UNI campus this year. She will also provide scholarship support for students who play high-demand instruments needed to support well-rounded programs in the School of Music.

Want your legacy to live on? Please call Dan Breitbach at the UNI Foundation to discuss including a gift to the School of Music in your estate plans.
